Country Risk Overview

Description

The security situation in Afghanistan is considered to be an extremely dangerous and there is a very high threat to personal safety and security. It is advised against all travel to Afghanistan due to the unstable security situation, ongoing insurgency, terrorist attacks, the risk of kidnapping and a high crime rate. Terrorism is a continuous threat throughout Afghanistan. The threat to foreigners, from terrorist and criminal violence, is extremely high. Numerous attacks have occurred in reputable public areas, as well as against Afghan and international institutions. Attacks in Kabul occur often and are completely unpredictable. Terrorists’ targets include hotels, embassies, government buildings, and locations known to employ or be frequented by Westerners. No location in Afghanistan can be considered safe or exempt from the threat of attack. Be particularly vigilant in the lead-up to and on days of national significance. Tactics used by terrorists include Suicide bombs, rockets, improvised explosive devices, armed assaults, and ambushes. Exercise extreme caution at all times, particularly in public areas frequented by foreigners such as hotels, restaurants, shops and marketplaces- and in the vicinity of public buildings, embassies, and foreign companies’ headquarters. There is an extreme risk of kidnapping for foreign nationals throughout Afghanistan. Numerous Westerners, including journalists and non-governmental organization workers, have been kidnapped and in some cases killed. Several organizations are behind these kidnappings, among them terrorists and criminal gangs. Kidnapping for ransom has become a very lucrative market in Afghanistan. Reports indicate that journalists may be lured to Afghanistan with offers of interviews when the real purpose is to kidnap them. Violent attacks against foreigners occur, including armed robbery and rape. Carjacking and robbery also occur. Weapons are easily available. Demonstrations, including anti-Western demonstrations, and civil unrest sometimes occur throughout Afghanistan. Some demonstrations have become violent, causing deaths and injuries. Political and socio-economic issues usually cause for protests. Avoid all demonstrations and large gatherings, follow the advice of local authorities and monitor local media. Millions of landmines throughout the countryside pose a threat. No area can be considered safe. Overland travel outside of Kabul is extremely dangerous and is restricted by the Afghan government to those who have armed security. Bogus checkpoints may be set up in order to commit attacks. Road travel should be carefully planned and only undertaken with others. Military and police forces are limited in rural areas. Banditry by armed groups is common. Many areas are controlled by warlords. Driving conditions are poor. Traffic is chaotic because traffic laws are non-existent or not enforced.

Security

Driving conditions are poor. Traffic is chaotic because traffic laws are non-existent or not enforced. Road travel should be carefully planned and only undertaken with others. Military and police forces are limited in rural areas. Banditry by armed groups is common. Many areas are controlled by warlords. Women do not usually drive vehicles. Kabul International Airport is serviced by several international airlines. Canadians should confirm their flight with their airline before going to the airport as it could close on short notice. Travel on flights operated by the Afghan company Ariana Airlines is strongly discouraged. Reports indicate that this airline does not meet international standards and has been banned from landing in Europe. On occasion, Ariana has been suspended from operating in the United Arab Emirates due to lax safety standards. Millions of landmines throughout the countryside pose a threat. No area can be considered safe. Demonstrations and civil unrest sometimes occur throughout Afghanistan; some demonstrations have become violent in the past, causing deaths and injuries. Political and socio-economic issues are usual causes of concern. Basic infrastructure services such as electricity and telephones are minimal, even in urban areas. Food and water shortages are common. In Kabul, there is a 24-hour emergency service, which is reachable by dialing 119.

Question	Best Practice Advice	Specific Mitigation	Marked as
Is there a risk of arrest / detention?	It is not unknown for the media to fall foul of the authorities or non-state actors (rebels/militias/protestors) who can arrest or detain individuals. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • If any individual is likely to break the law / be arrested / detained this should be discussed with management and legal advice should be taken. If laws are broken Insurance coverage may be in jeopardy, so this should also be understood before embarking on any activity. • A contingency plan should be detailed in the scenario of arrest detention and local legal representation should be identified in advance 	KABUL CITY	Applicable and individuals with leverage who may potentially be able to assist. Depending on the location of the arrest / detention the first hours can be crucial so having an intervention plan is useful.

- Have a means by which to raise the alarm or ensure that you have a robust check in procedure so that if you do not call in, your management knows how to start looking for you.
- Factor in that your electronic devices (phone/computers) are likely to be compromised so have strong passwords and encryption. Depending on who is carrying out the arrest/detention coercion may be used to extract your password so make sure your devices have no unnecessary compromising data and where possible compartmentalise in hidden partitions. See Infosec section for more information.
- Be conscious that any sources / fixers / contributors may be compromised by your arrest so sanitise recorded information generally depending on the threat model.
- Consider the long term effects on your mental health and speak to your management about this.
