Country Risk Overview

Description

The security situation in Afghanistan is considered to be an extremely dangerous and there is a very high threat to personal safety and security. It is advised against all travel to Afghanistan due to the unstable security situation, ongoing insurgency, terrorist attacks, the risk of kidnapping and a high crime rate. Terrorism is a continuous threat throughout Afghanistan. The threat to foreigners, from terrorist and criminal violence, is extremely high. Numerous attacks have occurred in reputable public areas, as well as against Afghan and international institutions. Attacks in Kabul occur often and are completely unpredictable. Terrorists' targets include hotels, embassies, government

Security

Driving conditions are poor. Traffic is chaotic because traffic laws are non-existent or not enforced. Road travel should be carefully planned and only undertaken with others. Military and police forces are limited in rural areas. Banditry by armed groups is common. Many areas are controlled by warlords. Women do not usually drive vehicles. Kabul International Airport is serviced by several international airlines. Canadians should confirm their flight with their airline before going to the airport as it could close on short notice. Travel on flights operated by the Afghan company Ariana Airlines is strongly discouraged. Reports indicate that this airline does not meet international
